KECSAC Background

Through the Kentucky Educational Collaborative for State Agency Children (KECSAC), the Commonwealth of Kentucky annually provides residential and community based services to approximately 8,000 state agency children. These young people are the responsibility of the Department of Juvenile Justice, the Department for Community Based Services and the Department for Behavioral Health, Developmental and Intellectual Disabilities. The Departments operate, fund, or contract services from a variety of programs including residential facilities, group homes, and day treatment centers. State agency children also reside in private child care and mental health programs operated by child welfare agencies and organizations.

The education of youth at-risk is significant in many agencies' treatment interventions. Typically, educational services for state agency children are the responsibility of local education agencies. Prior to the establishment of KECSAC, the education programs for state agency children were traditionally limited by inequitable funding, management, and service coordination.

Additionally, the different levels of educational services provided to youth compounded the inequities that existed in the delivery of educational services to Kentucky's students who were at-risk and delinquent.

To address the challenges associated with treating troubled youth, Kentucky adopted innovative strategies stemming from legislation aimed at providing life skills and education for those youth. KECSAC is the result of a legislative initiative in 1992 designed to further extend the state's educational reform effort to Kentucky's state agency children.

Kentucky Education Reform Act

In 1990, the Kentucky General Assembly enacted the landmark Kentucky Education Reform Act (KERA), passed in response to a Kentucky Supreme Court decision declaring the state's entire system of public schools unconstitutional (Rose v. Council for Better Education, 790 S.W.2d 196 [Ky. 1989]).

That decision was the culmination of a 1985 lawsuit filed by 66 of Kentucky's 176 local school districts against the Governor, the Superintendent of Public Instruction, the State Board of Education, the State Treasurer, and the Kentucky General Assembly for failing to provide an efficient system of common schools.

The Supreme Court relied upon Section 183 of the Kentucky Constitution which states: "The General Assembly shall, by appropriate legislation, provide for an efficient system of common schools throughout the state" (Ky. Const. §183) in holding Kentucky's school system to be inadequate.

KECSAC's Establishment

KERA called for sweeping changes in the funding and delivery of elementary and secondary education in the Commonwealth. However, it did not specifically address the needs of state agency children. In response to this deficiency, the Kentucky General Assembly passed Senate Bill 260 in 1992, which called for the establishment of the Kentucky Educational Collaborative for State Agency Children (KECSAC) (KRS 158.135). Kentucky House Bill 826, passed by the Kentucky General Assembly in March 1994, broadened the eligibility for state agency children beyond those located in state operated and contracted day treatment, group homes, and residential placements. Under HB 826, the definition of state agency children was expanded to include youth placed or financed through the Cabinet for Families and Children in other residential treatment programs.

In 1996, the General Assembly enacted House Bill 117 which established the Kentucky Department of Juvenile Justice and transferred responsibility for youthful and public juvenile offenders to the new agency.

In 1998, KRS 158.135 was again revised with the passage of House Bill 447 and House Bill 689, which expanded the definition of state agency children to include youth in therapeutic foster care placements and those confined in state operated juvenile detention facilities.

The Collaborative works with local education agencies and treatment programs to provide quality educational experiences that meet the varying needs of youth meeting the definition of state agency children. These educational experiences include academic, pre-vocational, vocational, special education, social skills, and postsecondary offerings, which are in compliance with state and federal educational laws and regulations.
